

Question: National or State MBA?

Answer: Both

Why? We Are Stronger Together.

Working together we support and protect our industry on all fronts — at the national and state levels.

How it Works

Your National MBA is committed to providing unmatched value and unparalleled benefits. Whether it's watching the marketplace, providing networking and educational opportunities or advocating for the industry in Washington, D.C., MBA protects its members and supports their success.

Just as state governments are not branch offices of the federal government, our state MBA partners are not branch offices of MBA. Therefore your company must retain membership in both organizations separately. While MBA represents your business inside the Beltway, your state MBA fights the threats to your interests every day in state capitals around the country.

Did You Know?

- MBA's state legislative database is currently tracking 7,500 pieces of mortgage-related legislation. Most of these are not in your company's best interest.
- Bad state legislation can go viral. State legislatures often copy each other in ways that will inadvertently increase costs for lenders and consumers.

- State legislators want to hear directly from those businesses that operate in their communities. Therefore, state and local MBAs are your most effective advocates at this level.
- MBA and the state MBAs work together to speak with a strong and powerful voice. This is a proven formula — when we work as a team, we achieve great results.

What Can You Do?

To best protect our interests and position our industry for success, both your state and national MBAs need you as an active and engaged member.
